Make W&L the best it can be: The Generals Redoubt Annual Fund

Washington and Lee needs our help. Join alumni, parents and students as we seek to preserve W&L's mission.

At The Generals Redoubt, we strive to advance W&L's unique history and traditions of honor, civility, and classical liberal arts education.

W&L's mission is clear: Provide a liberal arts education that develops students' capacity to think freely, critically, and humanely and to conduct themselves with honor, integrity, and civility.

The current W&L administration, however, does not agree that civility, honor, free speech and student self-government are essential to our community's success. It has stifled speech and upheld uncivil administrators, like the new Dean of College who prefers obscenity to civility.

In the latest affront to W&L's mission, The Wall Street Journal quoted President Dudley stating that he wants no part in "culture wars." Yet he and his administration have escalated our political divisions by silencing students whose views don't adhere to the left-leaning academic orthodoxy, as we saw with the College Republicans at the Student Activities Fair this year.

Students are losing their autonomy, and our university is losing its sense of self. Washington and Lee, especially the student body, needs our help more than ever.

We ask that you:

- Insist on the resignations of President Dudley and Chairman McAlevey in order to restore to leadership positions those who appreciate the values that make Washington and Lee University great.
- Make a tax deductible gift to The Generals Redoubt, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, as we work every day to advance W&L's unique history and traditions of honor, civility, and classical liberal arts education.
- Donate your time to spread the word about the issues our school faces.

Thank you, Neely Young, for to all your service to The Generals Redoubt! Neely co-founded TGR and after stepping down from TGR duties in October, became our first Emeritus Director. Neely is largely responsible for the success of the Redoubt, and we cannot thank him enough.
